

University of Hohenheim, Germany. Vacancy for a Post-doc at the Department of Organizational and Economic Psychology

The University of Hohenheim is seeking applications for a Post-doc position in the field of social and organizational psychology. The research of the department focuses on leadership, particularly shared leadership, and on the influence of indoor environments on human performance and well-being. The aim of this research is to identify parameters influencing people's performance and well-being; this comprises various aspects of the physical and built environment at work (e.g., lighting, room climate), of sales areas (color design of products, sales rooms, and shops), and of interactions (conversational patterns, shared leadership).

Requirements

We are looking for a talented researcher and lecturer with a completed PhD in social, environmental or organizational psychology. The candidate should have a profound knowledge of social- and /or organizational psychology, demonstrable experience with lab and field research, advanced statistical skills, and an affinity for interdisciplinary research. Integrating his/her future research into the broader research topic of the interdisciplinary research program "People Inside" is highly desired.

The successful candidate will teach four weekly hours per semester.

Appointment and salary

We offer:

- a challenging job in a open and interdisciplinary research team with broad research experience ranging from social-cognitive to applied social and organizational research;
- optimal research resources for both lab and field studies;
- a 100% position for a period of 3 years (Entgeltgruppe 13 TV-L)

Information

Requests for further information should be directed to Prof Dr. Lioba Werth
